Trumpet Table, Low - Silver Travertine

Product Description

The design of the Trumpet Table, Low in Silver Travertine, is born from the bold spirit of the 1970s, a celebration of sculptural form and refined simplicity.

Recalling an era when design embraced freedom, fluid lines, and fearless geometry, its graceful curves and trumpet-shaped silhouette resonate like a note held in suspension, a gesture of music translated into form. It channels the rhythm of jazz, the energy of modernist interiors, and the optimism of a time unafraid of statement and style.

Grounded, tactile, and architectural, the table features a sculptural base in hand-painted fiber concrete, crowned by a disc of natural Silver Travertine layered in soft greys and earthy taupes. The elegant curves and interplay of materials create a rhythmic, grounded presence, perfect as a coffee table or sculptural accent. Modern yet timeless, the Trumpet Table is bold yet refined, simple yet expressive, a presence that draws the eye and shifts the energy of a room.

Family Description Text

The Trumpet Collection, born from the bold spirit of the 1970s, is a celebration of sculptural form and refined simplicity. It recalls an era when design embraced freedom, fluid lines, and fearless geometry. With its graceful curves and trumpet shaped silhouette, the collection resonates like a note held in suspension, a gesture of music translated into form. It channels the rhythm of jazz, the energy of modernist interiors, and the optimism of a time unafraid of statement and style.

Meticulously crafted through traditional techniques, the Trumpet Collection reveals itself in two expressions, each with its own soul. One is formed entirely from glass, a luminous sculpture that captures light as though it were sound, refracting it into warmth and depth, while the other is grounded, tactile, and architectural, with a sculptural base in hand painted fibre concrete crowned by a disc of natural stones. Together, these interpretations embody the essence of the Trumpet Collection: modern yet timeless, bold yet refined, simple yet expressive, a presence that draws the eye and shifts the energy of a room.

Maintenance Guide Description

This piece combines the natural elegance of Silver Travertine with the sculptural strength of hand-painted fiber concrete. Both materials are crafted to endure, yet each requires mindful care to preserve its beauty.

For Silver Travertine, dust regularly with a soft, dry cloth. Because travertine is naturally porous, wipe spills immediately to prevent staining from liquids such as wine, coffee, or oils. Avoid acidic or abrasive cleaners, as these can etch or dull the surface. For lasting protection, professional sealing is recommended.

For hand-painted fiber concrete, clean only with a soft, dry cloth. Do not use water, soap, or chemical cleaners, as moisture and detergents may damage the painted finish. Avoid abrasive pads or rough materials. Protect surfaces with coasters, mats, or felt pads to prevent scratches, stains, or heat marks, and handle objects carefully to avoid impact on edges or corners.

With consistent, thoughtful care, the natural character of travertine and the refined finish of hand-painted fiber concrete will retain their contrast and harmony, allowing the furniture to age gracefully while maintaining its sculptural presence.

Materials Description

This material pairing unites the natural character of Silver Travertine with the sculptural strength of fiber concrete. Silver Travertine, known for its soft greys, layered striations, and subtle tonal shifts, brings a sense of grounded elegance shaped by millennia of sedimentary formation. Each piece is distinct, with linear patterns that add texture, depth, and a calm visual rhythm.

In contrast, fiber concrete offers stability and resilience. Reinforced with fibers and cast in molds, it allows for bold sculptural forms while remaining lightweight and durable. When combined, the refined natural beauty of travertine and the architectural strength of concrete create a dialogue between organic texture and precise craftsmanship.

The result is a material composition that is both expressive and enduring; timeless stone anchored by crafted concrete, designed to enrich furniture with contrast, balance, and sculptural presence.
